The fact is that section 12 of the Tax Law requires the Assessors to send notices and blanks throughout each district, and the citr Assessors will commence sending such notices to-day. It is imported that the blanks be filled up and returned to the Assessors within the 10 days specified in the blank.

A Girl in Search of Parents.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Tribune. SIR: Some 13 years since, a little girl, about six Sir: Some 13 years since, a little girl, about six pears cid, was brought to this city by a woman who gave her name as Evans, who told different atories about the child. At one time she stated that she took the child from the Poor-house in Penn Yan, in this State. Another story she told was that she was an illegit imate child, that her father was a wealthy merchant, that her mother had abandoned the child, and that she (Mrs. Evans) had come into possession of her by the mother's abandonment.

Mrs. Evans) had come into possession of her by the mother's abendonment.

This child has been most carefully trained and educated, by the kind family with whom she has been, for 13 years, and she is now exceedingly desirous of learning something of her friends. She remembers of living by a lake, and in a house with a great many flowers about it.

She also remembers of being in Elmira or vicinity, where letters were brought to the house by a man by the name of Gray, who was in some way-connected with the Post-Office.

There are some things that seem to indicate that this child may have been stolen, and that relatives may be living who would be glad to hear from her.

Editors would confer a fayor by publishing this statement, and information will be thackfully received and cheerfully communicated by

Mr. Peabody, on the 17th, attended at the London Guildhall, accompanied by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, at the request of the managing committee, to distribute the prizes gained by the successful competitors at the Working Classes Industrial Exhibition, which has been held there for some weeks. On arriving at the hall Mr. Peabody was halled with enthusiastic cheers, and having taken a seat assigned to him on the right of the Lord Mayor, on the platform at the east end of the building, the honorary secretary read a report, which stated that the aggregate admissions on payment during the 35 days the Exhibition had been open, had been 41,576. Upward of 2,500 children of the different ward and day schools had visited the Exhibition free. The number of prizes awarded by adjudicators chosen by the exhibitors was 133, of which 39 were medals and 34 were honorary mentions. The total number of exhibitors was 827, exhibiting 1,521 articles, 32 only of which were ineligible for prizes. No prizes had been given or awards made but to the actual producers of the articles exhibited, in conformity with a rule laid down by the committee.

The Lord Mayor, addressing the meeting, said:

If there was one thing more than another that could add laster and interest to the proceedings of the day, it was the presence of their honored and distinguished triend. Mr. George Peahody. [Loud cheera.] They were, indeed, deeply indebted to him for his presence on the occasion. Their friend had refused all invitations of late, but he had felt it to be a pleasure to witness that beautiful and interesting sight within that noble hall. (Cheers.) He might repeat a remark which he had heard Mr. Peabody utter in reference to something else within the last half hour. He said the ruling passion of his life had been that every man should go where duty called him [cheers] and he took that to mean that he felt that, after the universal gratitude expressed by the people of this country to him, it was his duty, before he left this ancient city, to take his farewell of those whom he had now the honor to address. He had great pleasure in presenting to their notice their excellent friend, Mr. Peabody, who was greeted with acclamations, said: Mr. Peabody, who was greeted with acclamations, said: Mr. Peabody, who was greeted with acclamations, said: Mr. Loan Mayor, Labies ANG GENTIANEN: I beg to acknowledge with heartfelt gratitude the kind expressions which the Lord Mayor has just sed toward me. Springing as I do from the people, and owing with you the Angle Saton stock, I undergoedly rejoice in this fresh evidence of the advancement of the industrial classes in the dignity of labor and in those habits of self-reliance soft housest independence which canobic any people and afford the surest guaranty of the true prosperity and moral greatness of any country. [Cheers, I it is true that these prizes which I am about to distribute are the just reward of your own personal efforts, but I hope you will show me to remind you that, in receiving your certificate of undoubted merit, you will accept it sizes as an acknowledgment made by you in this century which will be productive of good and redound to the advantage of future generations, who must profit by your landable exertions in the field of selentific research, and in the open workshop of a nation's constructive to me the happiness of returning to this country, I hope to see the com

The prizes awarded to the succession competers were then distributed. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted a considerable time.

Mr. Peabody, acknowledging a vote of thanks which had been passed by acclumation, referred to the delight he had experienced in meeting them, and in seeing the great city. I trust (be continued to say) you will go on and prosper in this good work, until every working man in London shall feel that he is a man and has the dignity of a man as much as any other intividual. (Cheers, I It only rests with themselves to do not they have the power to do, and they will not only accomplish what they intend to do, but what will benefit to a great degree this great country and the whole world. I say again, so on in the work you have begind and you will find this hall will not hold one half the work ing people who will be entitled to receive medals for their scientific and other qualifications. On Friday or Saturday I shall be on my way to my maive land, and I shall have nothing to carry with me but what I hope will be delightful to my countrymen and delightful to me. (Cheers.)

On the motion of Mr. Head, Chairman of the Managing Committee, seconded by Mr. Peabody, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to the Lord Mayor.

The Lord Mayor said he had taken a deep interest in the success of the undertaking. Austria and Prussia.

Austria and Prussia.

The belief in a pacific solution of the Austro-Prussian difficulty daily grew stronger.

A special Vienna telegram of the 19th to The London Times says: "It is now highly probable that peace will be maintained between Austria and Prussia. The note purporting to be the reply of Austria to a dispatch from Earl Russell is a pure invention. The Austrian Government has received no such dispatch as that ascribed to the Esglish Prime Minister."

According to a Berkin telegram, it was considered likely that Austria would make concessions to Prussia on the question of disarmament, and it was asserted that she had entered upon a more conciliatory line of policy. These pacific rumors were, however, subsequently denied, and it was asserted that Austria had addressed a fresh dispatch of a peremptory character to the Prussian Government, and that Court Beleredi, President of the Austrian Ministry of State, had tendered his resignation.

Popular meetings, at which war was strongly denounced, continued to be held in various parts of Prussia.

A Vienna telegram of the 29th says:

"The reply of Austria to the Prussian dispatch of the 15th inst. was forwarded to Berlin yesterday. It is said to be of a purely formal but peaceful character, containing proposals for the simultaneous reduction of the Austrian and Prussian military establishments to a peace fooding at an early and fixed date. To-day's journals state that rumors are current of an arrangement alleged to have been come to between Austria and Prussia, whereby the former power engages to demobilize her troops by the 25th, and the latter by the 26th of April. The accuracy of this report is not vouched for."

The Ministers of the various Middle German States were about to hold a conference at Augustenberg, in order to consider the question of a reform in the Federal Constitution.

The London Times of the 21st has received the news that, at a conneil held on the 20th at Schonbrunn, the Emperor of Austria and Count Mensdorff, against, it is added, the advice of some other Ministers, resolved to with draw Count Karoly, the Austrian Ambassador, from Berlin; and this decision having been made known to M. de Werther, the Prussian Ambassador at Vienna, it was expected that he would take his departure immediately.

The immediate cause of the rupture is said to be that Count Mensdorff, after receiving the Prussian answer of the 15th, telegraphed a repotition of the Austrian demands of the 7th, and received a fresh refusal on the 19th. Council was then held, and the opinion of the Emperorand his ministers being in favor of the bolder course, is was adopted.

additional arguments, the roasons already set forth in his additional arguments, the roasons already set forth in his communication to the Diet. Baron de Beust replied verbally to the Minister of Prussia at Dresden, that he regretted not to find in the note more precise indications than those previously given to the Diet as to the real views of the Prussia Cabinet in the important question raised. He added that the other German Governments shared in that regret, and that at the next sitting of the Diet, Prussia would be invited to bring forward a detailed plan on which the Government could deliberate.

It is runored that the Emperor of Austria has replied to a deputation from Pesth that he will shortly pay another visit to Buda, if peace be not disturbed in Germany. It is stated that the Prussian Government will not admit of any prolimmary discussion of its proposals for a reform of the Federal constitution; Prussia domands, first, the convocation of a German Parliament, and then will submit her programme for reform.

A telegram from Munich, April 20, says: Baron vender Pfortier, Bararian Minister for Foreign Affairs, leaves here to-morrow for Augsburg, to be present at the conference which is to be held in that town by the ministers of different German Middle States. Baron von Beust, the Saxon Prime Minister, Baron von Varabuler, the Wurtsemberg Minister for Foreign Affairs, Baron von Dalwigh, President of the Ministry of Herse-Darmstadt, and probably Herr von Edelsheim, will also be present at the conference.

The Dresdner Journal of April 20 denies the statement that the Cabinet of Vienna had accepted the programme for the reform of the constitution of the Diet agreed to between Bavaria and Saxony, and states that no such propesition has been submitted by those States to the Austrian
